Chiz: CJ bets to undergo psych test

By Gil C. Cabacungan

CHIEF Justice hopefuls will not only be required to bare their personal fortunes and open up all their bank accounts, the Judicial and Bar Council will also require them to undergo a psychological test.

According to Sen. Francis "Chiz" Escudero, a congressional representative in the JBC, they will have to go through psychological testing "to ascertain their character and thinking."

"The JBC has hired a psychologist to conduct the testing and everybody has to go through this. The results will be confidential and will be valid for one year. This will be added information for the JBC," said Escudero.

The senator said the psychological tests were a standard requirement for all judges and justices as part of the selection process to weed out individuals unfit for the position. Escudero said they would also be required to submit an NBI clearance.

Psychological tests are usually designed to gauge a person's personality and their suitability for certain jobs. For example, psychological tests can be used to assess a person's open-mindedness, conscientiousness to detail, ability to interact with others and deal with stress—qualities which are often mentioned as appropriate in judges.

Such tests could also be used to identify "abnormal patterns" such as tendencies toward conservatism, depression, anxiety, paranoia, psychopathic deviance, schizophrenia and other personality disorders.

Shortly after the Senate voted to convict former Chief Justice Renato Corona for not declaring all his assets, the JBC voted to require candidates for the position of Chief Justice to submit a waiver on their bank deposits and income tax returns (ITR) for private candidates and statements of assets, liabilities and net worth (SALN) for public officials. Escudero explained that these requirements were "consistent with the general sentiment of the people during and after the Corona impeachment process. That is to set the highest bar for transparency and accountability among those who are in and those who wish to join the government service." Senators said they voted to oust Corona primarily because he admitted to having hundreds of millions in peso and dollar deposits that he did not list in his SALN.

Escudero said the JBC was likely to submit its recommendations to the President on July 30. Mr. Aquino has one month to make his choice.

Escudero said the public interviews would be conducted in the middle of July but he stressed that these would not be "inquisitorial" in nature but merely informative.

He said it was up to the candidates perceived to be closer to former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo or President Aquino to decide whether they should continue with their nomination. "It's a personal decision. I myself decided to decline any nomination because as one of the jurors, it is not right to profit from my actions. But I am not prejudging them," said Escudero.

Among the nominees are acting Chief Justice Antonio Carpio, Justice Secretary Leila de Lima and Revenue Commissioner Kim Henares.

Carpio was accused by Corona of instigating his impeachment while De Lima and Henares testified against Corona in the impeachment trial.

Victory consolidated

EDITORIAL

THE SENTENCING of Indonesian Umar Patek by a Jakarta court to 20 years in jail consolidates the victory against global terrorism that started with the killing of al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden in 2011. Patek, the man who devised the bombs that killed 200 people at Bali nightclubs in October 2002, was arrested in the same Pakistan town where US forces tracked down and killed Bin Laden, the man behind the Sept. 11, 2001, assaults on the World Trade Center's Twin Towers in New York.

Now both Bin Laden and Patek have been either killed or jailed. Justice has been, more or less, served the victims, and extremism has been disabled.

For the Philippines, the conviction and jailing of Patek should be a welcome development since until his arrest, he was the country's most wanted man. He is suspected to be behind the January 2011 bombing of a bus on Edsa in Makati City, which left five people dead. Married to a Filipina, Rugaiyah binti Husein Luceno, Patek stayed for eight years in Mindanao where he fled after the Bali bombings. He found safe refuge in the south where he worked along with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and the Abu Sayyaf kidnap-for-ransom gang. Meanwhile, he made trips to Indonesia and worked with the Jemaah Islamiyah, the Southeast Asian splinter group of al-Qaida, in setting up a militant camp in Aceh. Thus, Patek thrived and carried out his activities in the Philippine [illegible] where he found a conflict-riven environment that welcomed his brand of extremism.

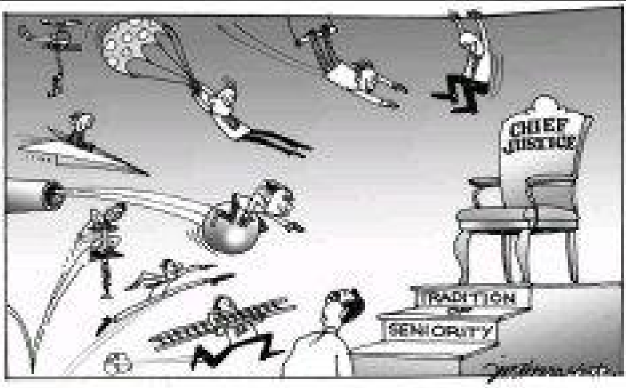

To their credit, Indonesian authorities prosecuted Patek with firmness and determination, sentencing him to jail and dealing a lethal blow against Jemaah Islamiyah and terrorism. It has also sentenced Patek's wife to 27 months in jail for immigration violations. Three of the masterminds of the Bali bombings—Imam Samudra, Amrozi bin Nurhasyim and Ali Ghufron—were executed in 2008. Patek was the last of the accused to stand trial in Indonesia. He got a jail term instead of death penalty because he had expressed remorse for what he did.

For Indonesia, which has the world's largest Muslim population, the 2002 Bali bombings were a watershed. Bali is a [illegible] community that's Indonesia's prime tourist site, drawing Western tourists by the thousands every year. The bombings by fundamentalist Muslims of a non-Muslim resort town were a blow to the secular state and the multiculturalism and respect for religious [illegible] Bali has vowed to protect and promote. The assaults forced the state to confront the presence of violent militants. Previous to Bali, there had been attacks on Christian churches, much like the attacks on Christian churches and the kidnapping of missionaries in Mindanao. True enough, among the charges Patek faced was a series of bombings that targeted Christian churches in Aceh.

Although the jailing of Patek is a decisive blow against extremism, the campaign against terrorism must not rest. Patek belongs to a generation of extremists who continue to operate even if they're on the run. Many of this generation, like Patek, trained and fought in Pakistan and Afghanistan in the early 1990s and were deeply influenced by Bin Laden's teachings. Patek's co-refugee when he was in Mindanao was Dulmatin, another former Jemaah Islamiyah member, who returned to Indonesia and helped set up a military-style training camp in the province of Aceh. He was killed in a police raid just outside Jakarta in March 2010.

For Philippine authorities, the killing of Dulmatin and the capture of Patek should be instructive, if a bit humiliating. The two had consistently evaded capture by the Philippines' military and police when they were in Mindanao in the last decade. In 2008 while their comrades faced the firing squad in Jakarta, Patek and Dulmatin were playing hide-and-seek with government forces. At one point, the Western Mindanao Command made the utterly laughable claim that the two were doling out money to communities so as to elude the military dragnet. The episode illustrates why Indonesia is winning the war against terrorism while the Philippines is losing it. Indonesia delivers results; the Philippines delivers alibis.

SUV DRIVER TRIES TO BEAT RED LIGHT, HITS TAXI

Cabbie dies in mishap

By Marcy C. Carvajal

A TAXI CAB driver was killed while two other men were injured in a five-vehicle mishap which occurred after the driver of a sport utility vehicle tried to beat the red light at a major intersection in Quezon City yesterday morning, according to a police traffic report.

PO3 Andy Siena of the Quezon City Traffic Enforcement Group said that the cab driver, 36-year-old Efren Datu, a resident of Barangay Sto. Niño in Novaliches, Quezon City, died on the spot.

On the other hand, the driver of the speeding SUV—a Toyota Land Cruiser with plate number ULB 220—was identified as Jeremiah Sierra, 27, a tattoo artist and resident of Congressional Village, also in Quezon City.

He sustained minor injuries in the accident and was taken to a hospital for treatment.

"Sierra [tried to beat the red light] but he rammed the right side portion of the taxi. [The Land Cruiser] flipped over several times, landed on the other side of the road and hit more vehicles," Siena said.

He added that the accident took place at the intersection of Congressional and Mindanao Avenues in Barangay Bahay Toro around 5:20 a.m. yesterday.

After it was hit by Sierra's SUV, Datu's taxi cab flipped over several times until it came to rest in the middle of the road.

The victim died on the spot while his cab was wrecked.

Cop's sleeping habit kills him

By Jeannette I. Andrade

A POLICEMAN'S habit of keeping his gun close to him at all times—even during bedtime—resulted in his death yesterday morning after he accidentally pulled the trigger of the service firearm he was placing beneath his pillow.

When the gun went off, it hit PO2 Eldon Castillo, a member of the Caloocan City police, in the head.

He was rushed to Gat Andres Bonifacio Memorial Hospital where doctors declared him dead on arrival.

The accidental shooting took place around 2 a.m. yesterday inside the house of the 34-year-old policeman at Parola Compound in Tondo, Manila.

Last conversation

PO3 Rodel Benitez of the Manila Police District (MPD) homicide section said that the victim had just come home from work and was preparing to go to sleep on a cot in the living room when his sister, Donna, came in to talk to him about the groceries they were supposed to buy later in the day for their sari-sari (retail) store.

End-to-end energy solutions with Meralco's Managed Services

PEZA Director General Lilia B. de Lima, SEIPI president Ernesto B. Santiago and [illegible] lead the ribbon-cutting ceremonies to open the 2013 Philippine Semiconductor and Electronics Convention and Exhibition (PSECE).

Meralco recently launched its newest suite of services that provides a total, headache-free, end-to-end solution to corporate customers' energy requirements.

The first of its kind to be offered in the Philippines, Meralco Managed Services (MMS) – enabled through its subsidiary MServ – is a comprehensive offering that addresses customers' energy requirements on the load or customer's side of the electrical network.

MServ is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Meralco and is one of the country's premier energy management companies providing viable vertically integrated energy solutions.

The energy company's traditional business model only involves the line side: transmission and distribution of electricity up to the point of the customers' meter. For as long as Meralco provided this power reliably and uninterruptedly, the company has done its job and done its job well.

The load side – the energy supply chain after the meter, inside the customers' premises – is set up, provided and maintained by the customers as part of their capital expenditure (CAPEX).

To create the electrical architecture is critically complicated and largely expensive. Transformers for primary metering, cabling, designing and installing protective devices, UPSs, or generator sets can constitute a hefty portion of CAPEX.

This is a major financial decision since assets like these depreciate. Technology also becomes outdated. While the initial investment dividend over time, the cost of maintaining or repairing them, inversely rises.

More importantly, addressing power issues is not the core business, nor the competency of most companies and takes away focus from its main line.

Special guests PEZA Director General Lilia B. de Lima, SEIPI president Ernesto B. Santiago and [illegible] try out the Segway electronic vehicles.

But MMS opens new frontiers. It is a way for Meralco to engage a customer in a partnership that's very different from what they're used to.

Partly due to the evolution of customer needs, Meralco seized at the opportunity to share its expertise accumulated over a long and rich history. By allowing the electrical utility to do what it does best, the company allows the customers to do what they do best.

A Meralco relationship manager presents the complete suite of Meralco Managed Services to a group of PSECE participants.

SEIPI president Ernesto B. Santiago and [illegible] pose with the Meralco team (from left) [illegible], VP and Head of Corporate Business Group Victor S. Genuino, Relationship Managers [illegible], AVP and Head of Private Sector Relationship Management [illegible], VP and Head of Marketing and Customer Solutions and Innovations Jose Antonio T. Valdez.

Meralco's relationship managers (RMs) engage a customer at the Meralco Managed Services booth.

"Companies are beginning to realize that to be able to grow, they should focus on portions of their business that really add value. The money that they can utilize in terms of working capital to fund, for example, energy redundancy equipment, may be best used if they reallocate it to something else. Those things have a direct impact on the company's bottom line."

Victor S. Genuino
Meralco Vice President and Head of Corporate Business Group

Companies are realizing that there are professionals out there who can provide their needs beyond the electric meter. Because of this reality, they feel the job might as well be outsourced.

Meralco's core competency is power and energy, which puts them in a very strategic position to conceptualize this end-to-end solution. By taking this concern out of the customer, Meralco can move valuable resources from CAPEX to OPEX, or operational expenses, and lets customers focus on their core competency.

"Companies are beginning to realize that to be able to grow, they should focus on portions of their business that really add value. The money that they can utilize in terms of working capital to fund, for example, energy redundancy equipment, may be best used if they reallocate it to something else. Those things have a direct impact on the company's bottom line," explained Victor S. Genuino, Meralco Vice President and head of Corporate Business Group.

At the Philippine Semiconductor and Electronics Convention and Exhibition (PSECE) 2013 organized by the Semiconductor and Electronics Industries of the Philippines, Inc. (SEIPI) last June [illegible] at the SMX Convention Center, Meralco formally introduced its new service offering to the general public.

The distribution utility has soft-launched the product to determine interest via inquiries. The appeal has caught the attention of prospective clients, and Meralco is moving forward quickly.

"We're very bullish on this product. This service is something that we've passed on to our customers to gauge their level of interest, and it's been accepted well. We've spoken to industries and there's definitely some value," said Jose Antonio T. Valdez, Meralco Vice President and head of Marketing and Customer Solutions and Innovations.

The range that MMS offers is varied. Engagement with the utility provider can be from mapping out a reliable electrical system, designing a system, building the system, operating the system, monitoring the system, and/or maintaining the system. It's a mix-and-match customized menu based on a customer's needs.

SEIPI, whose mission is to grow the semiconductor and electronics business in the Philippines, has taken notice.

Meralco VP and Head of Corporate Business Group Victor S. Genuino with First Philec Solar Corp. president and CEO [illegible].

"We want to transform the country into a center of excellence in selected electronics industry products and processes and become the investment location of choice. We have the talent pool, the choice locations, and various fiscal incentives for these industries to settle in. If and when Meralco Managed Services delivers on what it promises, then I can see how this can be another impetus for multinational semi-conductor companies to set up shop in the Philippines," said Ernie B. Santiago, President of SEIPI.

PEZA Director General Lilia B. de Lima at the MMS booth with [illegible] Managing Director [illegible] and [illegible].

Established in 1903, Meralco has more than a century of honing its expertise, building its portfolio, and learning from failures and successes. Through the years, it has been able to introduce various innovations.

Meralco has built a solid reputation, one that has been built on the services it has delivered, the strength of its infrastructure, and the trust it has earned. In simple words, they are trusted energy experts.

For more information on Meralco Managed Services, please contact the Corporate Partners Group at 632-8061 or 1622-2578.

Sun guarantees 24/7 support for roaming subscribers

Telecommunications network Sun Cellular intensifies its customer service efforts by providing guaranteed 24/7 support for its roaming subscribers.

"As Sun Cellular's subscriber base continues to branch-off to different areas around the world, we recognize the customer's need to maintain reliable and comprehensive communication with us, especially with a service as dynamic and as flexible as Sun Cellular Roaming," says Reuben S.J. Pangan, Vice President for Customer Relationship Management of Sun Cellular.

The company has recently opened its TXTHotline1200, where subscribers can address their roaming concerns simply by texting these to 1200. Subscribers may also use TXTHotline1200 to report network issues, apply for postpaid lines, and send their inquiries, among others. Interested users need only to register by keying in REG <space> Last Name, First Name and sending to 1200.

Sun Cellular is also taking advantage of the immense popularity of social networking sites by establishing its own official Facebook (facebook.com/suncellularph) and Twitter (twitter.com/suncellfeeds) accounts. "We would like to give 'netizens' a channel that they can use to reach us while online. We realize that social networking sites have already become an integral part of our customers' lives," Pangan adds.

Users may also receive immediate feedback through Sun Cellular's own chat channel by logging on to suncustweb chat2.sun.net.ph, or by sending an e-mail directly to suncellular@digitel.ph.

Sun Cellular is a member of the PLDT Group.

Coke's GM talks about what can and should be done

By Marlet D. Salazar

IN 1912, American businessman H.A. Clarke decided to distribute Coca-Cola in the Philippines, the company's first venture in Asia.

One hundred years on, the soda company still dominates a significant share of the market not only for its flagship brand, but also with its diverse product portfolio.

According to Guillermo Aponte, president and general manager of The Coca-Cola Export Corp., the Philippines is among the Top 10 countries in the world when it comes to Coca-Cola volume sales.

"It used to be the largest but China and Japan have overtaken it," he says.

Aponte became Coca-Cola Philippines' general manager and president in January 2012.

Coke has launched a number of activities to mark its 100 years celebration in the country. It recently held the Coke 100 Years concert, introduced the Providers of Happiness Project, and launched various corporate social responsibility projects.

GUILLERMO Aponte

A LITTLE Red Schoolhouse located in Mindanao

"Corporate social responsibility is one of the most important elements of this celebration," Aponte says. "I take it very personally because I believe that we have a mission as a company worldwide and in the Philippines."

Aponte enumerates the four pillars or "core" of their projects that best signify the company's philosophy: education, entrepreneurship, environment and nutrition.

"Our company connects with the needs of the consumers and society," Aponte says. "We do these projects for the society to be better. We say thank you for giving us the opportunity to serve consumers in many ways and for making the brand what it is today."

Caring for the youth

Coke, through the Coca-Cola Foundation, is one of the first companies to address the country's classroom shortage with its Little Red Schoolhouse Project. It recently turned over its 98th school to the local government of Bukidnon in Mindanao. The company is looking at completing 100 classrooms by the end of this year, also as part of the centenary celebration.

The Coca-Cola Foundation launched the Little Red Schoolhouse project in 1997, in partnership with the Department of Education and the Philippine Business for Social Progress, one of the largest social responsibility networks in the country.

"We choose (the things) areas where there is the most need for classrooms," says Gilda Maquilan, The Coca-Cola Export Corp. corporate communications manager.

About 60,000 schoolchildren and more than 3,100 teachers have benefited from the endeavor. A total of 240 classrooms in 98 schools nationwide, products of the Little Red Schoolhouse project, come complete with electricity, running water, furniture and basic necessities.

Aponte also relates how Coca-Cola has partnered with Deped with the "BBS (The Basic National Shares project, which aims at completing 10,000 classrooms in 10 months.

For the Nutrition Intervention program, Coca-Cola partnered again with DepEd, the Department of Health, and the Department of Science and Technology Food and Nutrition

Previously, Adea had won the silver medal in what is considered the Olympics of Ballet, the USA International Dance Competition, held every four years in Jack-

Philstage bares 2011 Gawad Buhay! nominees, honors 4 performing arts icons

PETA's "Care Divas", directed by Maribel Legarda; right, Tanghalang Pilipino's "Noli Me Tangere, The Musical" directed by Audie Gemora

THE PHILIPPINE Legitimate Stage Artists Group, Inc. (Philstage), the country's only alliance of professional performing arts companies, announces the staging of the awarding ceremonies of the 2011 Gawad Buhay!: The Philstage Awards for the Performing Arts, on July 1, 7 p.m., at the Cultural Center of the Philippines' Main Theater Lobby.

Stage actor, singer and director Audie Gemora will direct the program scripted by George de Jesus.

Now on its fourth year, Gawad Buhay! is the first-ever industry awards exclusively for the performing arts juried by an independent panel of critics, scholars, reviewers and artists. Outstanding individual and group achievements in various artistic and technical aspects of play, musical and dance productions and performances are honored based on quarterly citations deliberated by the jury who are required to watch all productions of Philstage member-companies for the entire year.

The Philippine Educational Theater Association (Peta) leads this year race with a total of 19 nominations for its hit comedy-musical-drama production "Care Divas," about a group of Filipino caregivers working in Tel Aviv, Israel, who moonlight as glamorous drag queens by night.

It won the jury's nod for nominations in the categories of outstanding musical production, stage direction (Maribel Legarda), ensemble performance in a musical (the entire cast), original script (Liza Magtoto), original libretto (Liza Magtoto and Vincent de Jesus), musical direction and musical composition (Vincent de Jesus), choreography for a play or musical (Carlos Manlutac), costume design (John Abul), lighting design (Jonjon Villareal), sound design (Vincent de Jesus), set design (Leo Abaya), male lead performance in a musical production (Vincent de Jesus, Melvin Lee and Jerald Napoles), female featured performance in a musical production (Angeli Bayani), and male featured performance in a musical production (Paul Holme, Myke Salomon and Buddy Ilonardo).

With 16 nominations each, Peta's "William," which casts Shakespeare in a modern light before its characters and audiences, and with Tanghalang Pilipino's "Noli Me Tangere, the Musical," an adaptation of Dr. Jose Rizal's novel, tie for the second most nominated production.

(See sidebar for complete list of nominations.)

To be elevated to the Natatanging Gawad Buhay! roster of distinguished lifetime achievers in the performing arts are premier danseur Nonoy Froilan for dance, and actor-director and director Behn Cervantes for theater. Posthumous awardees are Tony Fabella for dance, and Rene Villanueva and Carlos dela Paz for playwriting and playwrights development.

According to Philstage president and Tanghalang Pilipino artistic director Fernando Josef, this year's Gawad Buhay! Edition is a tribute to the enduring creative excellence, perseverance and the unrelenting spirit of the Filipino performing artists in the face of unmitigated influx of foreign artists to the country.

"Despite lack of government support for the arts, we managed to come up with world-class productions that can equal or even surpass the quality of imported productions," Josef said.

Other Philstage officers are Peta's Maribel Legarda, vice president; Ballet Philippines' Paul Alexander Morales, secretary; Repertory Philippines' Rem Zamora, treasurer; and board members Ncar Domingo (Atlantis Actors, Inc.), Susan Macuja (Ballet Manila), Ruby Gujaso (Gantimpala Theater Foundation), and Audie Gemora (Trumpets). Elmo Redison Inglete of the Organisasyon ng Pilipinong Mang-aawit serves as executive director.

Admission to the awarding ceremonies is open to the public.

CONDO living is convenient, Andrea says, but she's still a country girl at heart.

HELPING Bea blow the candles on her birthday cake.

FORMER Viva Hot Babe Andrea del Rosario is the first to admit that her life has been turned upside down.

She disappeared from the scene for a while—to give birth and take care of daughter Bea, now two years old.

She acknowledges that Bea changed her life in many ways.

Soon after delivery, Andrea was told by doctors that the newborn was suffering from jejunal atresia—a condition where one of the three portions of the infant's small intestine was tied around one of the arteries of the colon, causing a blockage.

"Bea went under the knife four times," she recalls. "She spent months in the hospital's Intensive Care Unit."

It broke her heart to see her baby's tiny body go through so much.

"I didn't dwell on the problem, though," Andrea relates. "Otherwise, I couldn't function."

She reminded herself that she had to remain strong. In a roundabout way, it was her daughter who kept her afloat. "Her smile kept me going," Andrea now says with a smile.

Two years later, Bea is fully recovered. The proud mom has filled her condo unit with the baby's photographs, taken on weekend trips to the beach.

"Bea is a water baby; she loves the ocean," mom exclaims. "She is just per-
